

<https://transitionta.org/effective-practices/all-predictors/>

Predictors of Post-School Success

What Are Predictors?

Research suggests youth with disabilities are less likely to experience positive outcomes compared to peers without disabilities. Identification of in-school predictors of post-school success can provide educators and vocational rehabilitation counselors with information to design, evaluate, and improve transition programs.

Source: Secondary Transition Predictors of Postschool Success: An Update to the Research Base

List of Predictors of Post-School Success

By clicking on a predictor of post-school success below, you will get a list of effective practices that align with it.

Total: 22

Predictors/Outcomes	Education	Employment	Independent Living
Career Awareness	Promising	Promising
Career Technical Education	Research-based	Evidence-based

Community Experiences		Promising
Goal Setting	Research-based	Research-based	Research-based
Inclusion in General Education	Research-based	Research-based	Research-based
Interagency Collaboration	Promising	Promising
Occupational Courses	Promising	Promising
Paid Employment/Work Experience	Research-based	Research-based	Promising
Parent Expectations	Promising	Research-based
Parent Involvement		Promising
Program of Study	Research-based	Research-based
Psychological Empowerment	Promising	Promising	Promising

Self-Care/Independent Living Skills	Promising	Promising	Research-based
Self-determination/Self-advocacy	Research-based	Research-based	Promising
Self-realization		Promising	Promising
Social Skills	Promising	Promising
Student Support	Promising	Research-based	Promising
Technology Skills		Promising
Transition Program	Research-based	Promising
Travel Skills		Promising
Work Study		Research-based
Youth Autonomy/Decision Making	Research-based	Research-based	Promising